

ABSTRACT

An apparatus and method for testing infrared functions of infrared transceiver modules that is equipped with an infrared transmission capability mainly includes to start test operation before an infrared transceiver module being installed on an electronic 5 device thereby to shorten test time of the infrared transceiver module, reduce test cost and improve production yield of the infrared transceiver module.